Defamation suit against mayor gets tossed by judge

Court. Restaurateur failed to prove Ford's comments regarding 'corruption and skullduggery' were referring to him: Ruling

A judge has rejected a businessman's $6-million defamation suit against Mayor Rob Ford.

The businessman, Boardwalk Pub restaurateur George Foulidis, alleged that Ford defamed him in comments to the Toronto Sun's editorial board during the 2010 election campaign. Ontario Superior Court Justice John Macdonald found that Ford's words were not defamatory — and that Foulidis didn't even prove that Ford was referring to him in particular.

Ford's lawyer, Gavin Tighe, said the mayor is "pleased with the result."

Foulidis's lawyer, Brian Shiller, said they will consider an appeal but are in the early stages of reviewing the decision.

Foulidis had alleged that his reputation was severely damaged by Ford's criticism of the no-bid 20-year contract city council awarded Foulidis's company, Tuggs Inc., for the exclusive right to sell food on city land in the Eastern Beaches.

Asked by a Sun journalist about "the Foulidis deal," Ford responded that immense "corruption and skullduggery" occurs during council's "in-camera" closed sessions, then continued: "If Tuggs isn't, I don't know what is. And I can't accuse anyone, or I can't pinpoint it, but why do we have to go in-camera on a Tuggs deal?"

It's obvious Ford was saying only that he "sensed or suspected" corruption, Macdonald wrote. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Teen arrested for Facebook fight video

A Mississauga mother said her 13-year-old son is scarred for life after he was arrested at his middle school and brought to a police station in handcuffs over a video he posted to Facebook.

The Tomken Road Middle School student is alleged to have recorded a cellphone video of a scrap between two female classmates off school property on Dec. 17 and then posted it to his online profile.

The boy's mother said her son was called to the school's office on Dec. 19, where he was arrested by police, handcuffed and taken from the building to a police cruiser as other students looked on.

Quoted

"How is an adult or an educator going to justify this situation — traumatizing a child and handcuffing him? Who's the bigger bully?"

Mother of a 13-year-old Mississauga boy who was arrested at his middle school over a video he posted to his Facebook profile of a scuffle between two classmates

After a year of reported tragedy that has shed light on cyber-bullying of school-aged children, the boy, who can't be identified under the Youth Criminal Justice Act, was charged with mischief.

His mother, who also can't be named to protect the boy's identity, said the principal and school trustee called to say her son would be suspended for a month and transferred to another school.

On Thursday, Peel police said an underage female student, who also cannot be identified, was charged with assault on Dec. 19.

Const. Erin Cooper said the boy's mischief charges relate to interfering with the victim's reasonable use and enjoyment of Facebook, as outlined in the Criminal Code.

Police could not confirm whether the boy was handcuffed during arrest.

The boy's mother said she's not condoning the fight or her son's actions, but doesn't understand why he is being singled out in a situation she said was unfairly escalated by administration and police.

'Gay penguins' father chicks at Toronto Zoo

Holiday arrivals. Separated from each other for the breeding program in 2011, Buddy and Pedro spent all summer with their respective female mates

The holiday season has been a busy one for nesting penguins at the Toronto Zoo — five chicks have hatched to four couples, including Buddy and Pedro, once famously dubbed the "gay penguins."

All five chicks are healthy and show promise of surviving past the crucial three-week mark. Most chicks who make it past that point will have healthy lives.

Of five chicks born last breeding season, just three survived. Zookeepers are optimistic that a year of bonding over buckets of fish, swims and long waddles on the beach has prepared the couples for better breeding.

The first attempt to breed them was met with challenges — Pedro and his partner Thandiwey failed to produce any eggs, while Buddy and his mate, Farai, had two chicks but they were smothered because the pair built the nest too small.

Both are now fathers with their respective female partners. Pedro came first, with his chick hatching Dec. 16, followed by Buddy on Dec. 23.

'Still friends'

At first there was much public hand-wringing over the separation of Pedro and Buddy, but their offspring are essential to keeping the endangered African penguin species around.

- And the two seem to be handling the breakup well. "They're certainly still friends — we're very fortunate that our group gets along very well with each other," said zoo-keeper Brandon Wyatt.

Nesting penguins Buddy, front, and Pedro — formerly known as the "gay penguins" — have bonded and bred with female mates.

Ornge says whistleblowers to be protected

Ontario's embattled air ambulance service said Thursday it is taking steps to protect whistleblowers as it strives to bounce back from a series of scandals, including a criminal investigation.

Ornge said it is implementing a new whistleblower policy that will allow employees to voice their concerns in a confidential manner without fear of reprisal.

First snowfall a welcome sight for new immigrants

Winter wonderland. Family from Pakistan gets its long-awaited first taste of snow

Erum Naveed and her three children had heard about Canadian winters before they came to Toronto from Karachi, Pakistan, six months ago.

They bought their winter boots and snow pants, mittens and heavy jackets well ahead of time.

They couldn't wait to see snow for the first time.

As November passed and December neared its end, Ilsa Naveed, 13, started to worry that the snow wouldn't come.

On Thursday morning, the family awoke early, having heard weather reports that Toronto would finally get a dump of the white stuff.

It did — the city was blanketed in 15 centimetres, the first proper snowfall of the season, while the wider GTA had about 10 centimetres.

"We were really happy to see snow after all," said Ilsa, smiling at her younger brother and sister as they threw snowballs, piled powder into castles and mountains and made snow angels, behind a library on Thorncliffe Park Drive.

Cousins Shamir, 6, and Zymal, 5, Imran, who have lived in Toronto for four years, spent hours outside Thursday with the Naveeds, showing them how it's done.

"We feel a light coming from the snow," said Erum. "It's beautiful.... They love snow." TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Hitting the bottle. 41% of Canadians spend over $50 on booze in a weekend: Survey

How much do you spend on booze in a weekend? If it's more than $50, you're among friends. A survey from Play Taxi Media shows 41 per cent of Canadians spend over $50 from Friday to Sunday, with 23 per cent of this group regularly spending more than $100.

Play Taxi Media, a Canadian-based media company with a national network of touch screens in taxicabs, surveyed more than 8,000 riders in November about their drinking habits.

Beer was out in front as the favourite boozy beverage among those surveyed, with 37 per cent saying they prefer it to other drinks. Wine came in second at 22 per cent. Amongst beer drinkers Heineken was top choice at 39 per cent, over Corona (29 per cent), Molson Canadian (24 per cent) and Labatt Blue (eight per cent).

Vodka is the most popular spirit, with 35 per cent of surveyed riders preferring it, followed by whisky, then rum.

And it's likely a lot of people got a bottle of alcohol as a gift this Christmas, as only 17 per cent of respondents said they've never bought booze for someone else. PLAY TAXI MEDIA

'A series of setbacks.' Doctors still cautiously optimistic about Bush Sr.

Former President George H.W. Bush
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS FILE

Former U.S. President George H.W. Bush remained in the intensive care unit Thursday at a Texas hospital after suffering "a series of setbacks," including a stubborn fever, his spokesman said.

In a brief email Wednesday, Bush spokesman Jim McGrath said the 88-year-old had been admitted Sunday to Methodist Hospital. He said Bush, the oldest living former U.S. president, was alert and talking to medical staff.

He said doctors were cautiously optimistic about Bush's treatment and that the former president "remains in guarded condition."

On Thursday, McGrath told The Associated Press he had no new information on Bush's condition and that he would release another statement "when events warrant it."

Bush has been hospitalized since Nov. 23, when he was admitted for a lingering cough related to bronchitis after being in and out of the hospital for complications related to the illness.

A fever that kept Bush in the hospital over Christmas had gotten worse, and doctors had put him on a liquids-only diet Wednesday.

"It's a stubborn fever that won't go away," McGrath said.

The former president achieved notoriety in retirement for skydiving on at least three of his birthdays since leaving the White House in 1992.

'In good spirits.' Ailing Nelson Mandela to remain in Johannesburg

The doctors treating former South African leader Nelson Mandela believe he should remain in Johannesburg for now to be close to medical facilities that can provide care to the 94-year-old, the government said Thursday.

Mandela left a hospital Wednesday evening after nearly three weeks of treatment, and was brought to his home in the Johannesburg neighbourhood of Houghton.

The anti-apartheid icon, also known by his clan name, Madiba, has spent more time in recent years in the rural village of Qunu in Eastern Cape province, where he grew up.

Mandela's grandson, Mandla Mandela, said he hopes "it won't be too long before he's with us back in Qunu, where he belongs," but acknowledged that the doctors' assessment is critical to any decision to travel.

Mandela was admitted Dec. 8 to a hospital in the South African capital of Pretoria, 50 kilometres north of Johannesburg. The ex-president was treated for a lung infection and also had a procedure to remove gallstones.

Mandela is revered around the world as a symbol of sacrifice and reconciliation; a legacy forged in the fight against apartheid. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Monster storm grounds flights, causes car pileup

Snow squall.
Hundreds of flights cancelled as blizzard heads north to bury eastern Canada

Authorities found themselves relying on snowmobiles and snowshoes to respond to some emergency calls as a hibernal blanket smothered a 1,200-kilometre stretch of Eastern Canada on Thursday.

The snowstorm squashed plans to travel by air and land.

There were hundreds of flights cancelled and rampant delays — first at airports around Toronto and then, as the storm barrelled eastward, in Ottawa, Montreal, Fredericton and Halifax.

Montreal was walloped with surprising strength.

The city had expected a storm but nothing like the tempest that forced Environment Canada to hike the projected snowfall to up to 50 centimetres.

There were numerous road accidents.

One involved a pileup of at least 15 vehicles on a highway east of Montreal, near St. Cuthbert. Quebec provincial police also said many vehicles had skidded into snowy ditches in different parts of the province.

Still, police were counting their blessings late Thursday.

"There were no serious injuries," police Sgt. Martine Asselin said, speaking around 6 p.m., of the numerous Quebec road accidents. "We're lucky."

Because of the multi-car pileup, a stretch of the Trans-Canada highway was shut down near Montreal, with provincial police using snowmobiles to access the closed portion of Highway 40.

Southern Ontario was spared the worst of the storm. Still, Ontario Provincial Police said they were busy responding to numerous reports of vehicle accidents from Windsor all the way to the Greater Toronto Area.

Autopsy shows N.Y. gunman shot self, not hit by police fire

William Spengler.
Shooter died of self-inflicted shot; no positive ID of body in burned house yet

The U.S. gunman who lured two firefighters to their deaths died of a self-inflicted shot to the head and wasn't hit by return fire from a police officer, New York State Police said Thursday.

Investigators still hadn't made a positive identification of the body found in 62-year-old William Spengler's burned house. They have said they believe the remains are those of his 67-year-old sister, Cheryl Spengler, who also lived there.

Spengler set his home and a car on fire before dawn on Christmas Eve, took up a sniper's position and opened fire on the first firefighters to arrive, authorities said. He wounded two firefighters and a police officer.

Autopsies showed that volunteer firefighter Michael Chiapperini died of a single gunshot and Tomasz Kaczowka was killed by two, police said.

Trooper Mark O'Donnell said investigators weren't releasing information about how Spengler got the military-style Bushmaster .223-calibre semiautomatic rifle, 12-gauge shotgun and .38-calibre revolver found with his body. He said they're still tracing the history of the guns.

Spengler spent 17 years in prison for killing his grandmother with a hammer in 1980 and was barred from possessing weapons as a convicted felon. Authorities said they had no encounters with him after he was released from prison.

After Monday's attack, investigators found a typed letter laying out Spengler's intention to destroy his neighbourhood and "do what I like doing best, killing people."

Police chief wants earlier last call at Halifax nightclubs

Halifax's new police chief is drawing ire from the bar industry following his call to make nightclubs stop serving at 2 a.m.

Jean-Michel Blais, who's been on the job since October, wants the province to amend regulations that allow clubs with cabaret licences to serve liquor until 3:30 a.m., citing booze-fuelled late-night violence in the downtown entertainment district.

The executive director of the Restaurant Association of Nova Scotia, Gordon Stewart, called it a "knee-jerk reaction" to the problem.

"He's putting it on the back of the bar industry," said Stewart.

Most bars in the province do last call at 2 a.m. But there are eight watering holes with cabaret licences, four of those in Halifax.

Police argue that cutting people off earlier would put a dent in a crime spike that happens between 2 and 4 a.m. in Halifax's lively downtown bar district that has more than 250 licensed establishments.

In 2011, there were 155 assaults on weekend nights in the area, with a third of those occurring between 3 and 4 a.m. Property damage, drunk driving and liquor offences were also higher.

"The later you're getting, the more violence you're seeing," said Halifax Regional Police spokesperson Pierre Bourdages. Police are in "preliminary" discussions with the province, he said.

"We're devoting an enormous amount of police resources just to this area on weekends.... There's a cost to society of this."

Chief's hunger strike drags onward

Attawapiskat. New Democrat MP fearful of a national crisis should things worsen

An aboriginal chief's decision to go on a hunger strike until the prime minister agrees to a meeting has entered a deadly serious phase, a New Democrat MP said Thursday.

Charlie Angus, who stood by Attawapiskat Chief Theresa Spence as she began her fast on Dec. 11, says he's now reaching out to area chiefs to see what steps can be taken to solve what's at risk of becoming a national crisis.

"This is much bigger than Theresa Spence, it's much bigger than any individual community," Angus said Thursday as he prepared to travel to Ottawa to visit Spence on Friday.

Spence launched her protest earlier this month with a vow to "die" unless the Conservative government started showing more respect to First Nations concerns and aboriginal treaties.

She is demanding a meeting between the Crown, Prime Minister Stephen Harper and First Nations leaders to create a new relationship.

Her remote northern Ontario reserve was catapulted into the spotlight late last year after Angus wrote about the dire housing and economic conditions.

The crisis in Attawapiskat was followed by a historic Crown–First Nations gathering in Ottawa in January, where Harper met with aboriginal leadership to discuss economic and social development.

Aboriginal Affairs Minister John Duncan has expressed disappointment that Spence will meet with other politicians but not him.

"Given your willingness to accept meetings now I am hoping that you will reconsider my offer, as a Minister of the Crown, to meet or speak with you," Duncan wrote Spence late Wednesday night.

Though Spence has declared a hunger strike, for the last two and a half weeks she has subsisted on some soup and tea. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Prepare for unforeseen consequences

"If this thing goes south, who knows what the consequences are going to be.... The prime minister needs to put down the eggnog and get serious."

Young victims of sex tourists get second chance

Cambodia. Former Mountie co-founded centre for exploited girls after helping to catch Canadian perpetrator

At a nondescript, discrete compound in Cambodia, young girls form an orderly queue to be served noodles in the NewSong centre.

The newest among them, a seven-year-old nicknamed Srey, barges past the line, grabs fistfuls of the slippery food and bolts out the door. She's spotted in the backyard, furtively stuffing her face like an animal.

Her adult caregivers don't bat an eye. It's one of the child's first meals since being rescued from a backstreet brothel where she was forced into sex with adult men — almost certainly Canadians among them.

A girl rescued from a Cambodian brothel writes a letter of forgiveness to her mother. THE CANADIAN PRESS

"When she wasn't actually being abused by customers, they kept her chained below a table," said Brian McConaghy, the Vancouver-based former Mountie and co-founder of the rehabilitation centre for sexually abused and exploited girls.

The brothel owners would scrape their leftovers onto the floor when they were done eating. Srey's every meal was a competition with their dogs.

McConaghy will visit the girls again in January, including now 10-year-old Srey and several teens who were the victims of Canada's first prosecuted child-sex tourist, Donald Bakker.

The Vancouver man was arrested nearly a decade ago, largely as a result of the then-RCMP forensics investigator McConaghy. Each time he returns to the sanctuary, which he set up after leaving the RCMP to devote himself to victims, he sees signs indicating Canadians are still committing "grotesque" crimes against the country's most defenceless. Predators believe themselves immune and critics argue Canada's record doesn't contradict them: Only five men have been punished under Canadian laws against child sex tourism in 15 years. Egypt opposition accused of treason

Incitement. Allegations come one day after Morsi called for national dialogue to heal rifts

Egypt's chief prosecutor ordered an investigation on Thursday into allegations that opposition leaders committed treason by inciting supporters to overthrow Islamist President Mohammed Morsi.

The probe by a Morsi-appointed prosecutor was launched a day after the president called for a dialogue with the opposition to heal rifts opened in the bitter fight over an Islamist-drafted constitution just approved in a referendum. The opposition decried the investigation as a throwback to Hosni Mubarak's regime, when the law was used to smear and silence opponents.

The probe was almost certain to sour the already tense atmosphere in the country.

The allegations were made initially in a complaint by at least two lawyers sent to the chief prosecutor earlier this month. They targeted opposition leaders Mohammed ElBaradei, a Nobel Peace laureate and former head of the UN nuclear agency, former Foreign Minister Amr Moussa, and Hamdeen Sabahi. Both Moussa and Sabahi were presidential candidates who ran against Morsi in the last election.

The opposition dismissed the allegations.

LOOKING FORWARD TO AN EXCITING YEAR ON THE TTC

ANDY BYFORD
CEO
TORONTO TRANSIT COMMISSION

With 2013 just around the corner, a critical year in our quest to modernize the TTC is before us.

Having laid the foundations for a more business-like and customer-focused approach in the past 12 months, I want the TTC to make real progress in improving customer satisfaction this coming year.

Early in 2013, we will launch the first-ever TTC Customer Charter. This is a statement of what you can expect from us by way of ongoing, basic service delivery. But it will also commit us to specific, time-bound improvements to be delivered each quarter. We will publicly report against these commitments so that you can hold us to account.

We will also begin to roll out a new way of managing our subway service early in 2013. Based on the well-proven London Underground model, Group Station Managers will be accountable for groups of stations and adjacent bus and streetcar interchanges, with a mandate to improve customer service and safety, to motivate and manage groups of staff and to be highly visible members of the local community.

This will be the first part of a transformation of our staffing model that will see a much more proactive approach to customer service as we phase out the existing fare system and replace it with the PRESTO fare card over the next few years. The process will also involve reconfiguring stations to allow staff to engage more with customers and help them where and when they need it.

The coming year will also see further rollout of Toronto Rocket trains, testing of the new low-floor streetcars and reintroduction of articulated buses on certain routes. We will also complete the modernization of Pape Station.

Next year, I want us to drastically reduce the number of short turns on our surface routes. This will be achieved through better supervision and a more rigorous approach to control of vehicle bunching. I also intend to improve communication to customers where such short turns are unavoidable.

Other improvements next year will include customer safety and security through our team of Transit Enforcement Officers, customer information via rollout of better on-system information, as well as improvements to the way we engage with stakeholders and our neighbours.

All of this has to be achieved within a tight budget with no increase in subsidy from 2012. By constantly seeking to be more efficient and through adoption of modern business practice, I believe all of this can be delivered, and it is my job to do just that.

From all of us here at the TTC, have a happy, safe and prosperous new year!

DID YOU KNOW?

Today, a total of 26 Toronto Rocket trains are operating on the Yonge-University-Spadina line.

HOLIDAY DAY PASS

From Dec. 22, 2012, through Jan. 6, 2013, the TTC has extended the use of its TTC Day Pass for family group travel. The Day Pass, valid from the start of service until 5:30 a.m. the next morning, provides unlimited one-day travel for a group of up to six people — a maximum of two adults and not more than four children/youth 19 years of age and under. Customers can purchase a Day Pass for $10.50 until Jan. 1, at which time the Day Pass will cost $10.75. Free parking will be offered at all TTC parking lots on Dec. 31 after 3 p.m.

REMINDER: TTC FARE INCREASE JAN. 1

Effective Jan. 1, TTC riders will see a fare increase on tickets, tokens and passes, with cash fares and children's fares frozen in 2013. The TTC is expected to carry a record 528 million riders in 2013, with increased service to meet the ridership demand. An additional fare of five cents will be required when using old TTC Senior/Student tickets from Jan. 1, 2013, to Feb. 28, 2013. Old TTC Senior/Student tickets and Day Passes can be refunded beginning Jan. 1, Mon. through Fri., at select TTC Collector Booths and at the TTC MDP Office located above Davisville Station, 1900 Yonge St. For specific locations and times, visit www.ttc.ca.

TTC NEW YEAR'S EVE SERVICE FREE AFTER 10 P.M.

All subways and most surface routes (buses and streetcars) will run until 4 a.m. on Jan. 1, at which time the TTC's Blue Night Network begins.

Izok Corridor proposal

Harper's cabinet mulls Chinese resource project

Another massive Chinese-owned resource project is before Prime Minister Stephen Harper's cabinet.

Four federal ministers are to decide how to conduct an environmental review for the Izok Corridor proposal. It could bring many billions of dollars into the Arctic but would also see development of open-pit mines, roads, ports and other facilities in the centre of calving grounds for the fragile Bathurst caribou herd.

Centred at Izok Lake, about 260 kilometres southeast of Kugluktuk, the project would stretch throughout a vast swath of western Nunavut.

Izok Lake would have five separate underground and open-pit mines producing lead, zinc and copper. Another site at High Lake, 300 kilometres to the northeast, would have another three mines. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Facebook status update: 'Way uncool'

Privacy setting. Picture of Mark Zuckerberg's family leaks online

A picture that Zuckerberg's sister posted on her personal Facebook profile was seen by a marketing director, who then posted the picture to Twitter and her more than 40,000 followers Wednesday.

That didn't sit well with Zuckerberg's sister, Randi, who tweeted at Callie Schweitzer that the picture was meant for friends only and that posting the private picture on Twitter was "way uncool." Schweitzer replied by saying the picture popped up on her Facebook news feed. The picture shows four people standing around a kitchen staring at their phones with their mouths open while Mark Zuckerberg is in the background.

Randi Zuckerberg, who used to run Facebook's marketing department and now produces a reality television show, eventually said Schweitzer was able to see the picture because they had a mutual friend. Those tweets have since been taken down.

The Menlo Park, Calif., company recently announced it is changing its privacy settings with the aim of making it easier for users to navigate them.

The fine-tuning will include several revisions that will start rolling out during the next few weeks and continue into early next year. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Nap Nanny. 5 infant deaths force baby-recliner recall

Four national retailers agreed to recall more than 150,000 Nap Nanny baby recliners after at least five infant deaths and dozens of reports of children nearly falling out of the recliners, the Consumer Product Safety Commission said Thursday. The recall covers Nap Nanny Generations One and Two, and the Chill model infant recliners. All were sold between 2009 and 2012. The CPSC said the product poses a substantial risk of injury and death to infants. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

To or from the fiscal cliff?

U.S. President Barack Obama returned to the White House in Washington, D.C., Thursday, from his Christmas break in Hawaii to deal with the fiscal cliff. A last-gasp effort Thursday to avoid automatic tax increases and spending cuts got off on the same convulsive, partisan tone that marked congressional attempts to resolve the impasse before lawmakers headed home for Christmas. With a Dec. 31 deadline for an agreement to avert the so-called "fiscal cliff" rapidly approaching, leaders in each party demanded the other side take the initiative.

BIEBS WATCH, MOTHER NATURE PAYS A VISIT AND ANTISOCIAL MEDIA

THE LIST
Paul Sullivan
metronews.ca

It's time for the last Metro List of 2012! So let's rearrange those deck chairs before we fall off the fiscal cliff … or something like that.

1 Cliff-diving. The U.S. legislative and executive branches are playing a giant game of chicken with the global economy. Unless someone blinks and passes emergency legislation, the United States could bump its head on the debt ceiling early in the New Year and plunge the world into another 2008-style recession. Happy New Year, right?

2 Boxing Day madness. The annual post-Christmas shopathon is crazier than ever this year, as people across the country brave arctic temperatures while waiting in line to save a few dollars on stuff they don't need, right after a Christmas orgy of giving each other stuff they don't need. Could be a case of shop till you drop off the fiscal cliff.

3 O little town of Attawapiskat. This poverty-stricken Ontario First Nation has become the focal point for a national aboriginal protest movement. Chief Theresa Spence is 17 days into a hunger strike and says unless the Prime Minister sits down to a meeting on her terms, she'll keep it up until she dies. First Nations people have taken up her cause and are jamming the malls and streets, disrupting the above-mentioned shopping frenzy. Over to you, Mr. Harper.

4 Worst social-media trend ever. People in the U.S. tweeting pix of themselves grinning and gripping their new Christmas presents: AR-15 assault weapons — the very same type that was used in the Sandy Hook school shooting in Connecticut. With any luck, they won't shoot their eye out. Or anyone else's, for that matter.

5 The nerve Randi Zuckerberg, the sister of the man who invented Facebook, the world's foremost invasion of privacy, is PO'd at a friend who shared a Zuckerberg family photo already posted on Facebook. Huh?

6 Hey, it snowed. Mother Nature is not done with Toronto after all, bestowing a post-Christmas gift of 15 centimetres of snow on the metropolis. Forget about planting that palm tree, maybe. Mayor Rob Ford, to his credit, does not call in the army, a Snow Day tradition established by the last bad boy mayor, Mel Lastman.

7 OK, I built it, so where is everybody? Calgarian Norm Price goes to a lot of trouble and builds a giant skating rink on his property. It's even got lights for nighttime skating. Only trouble is: No skaters. Sure, it's cold, but Norm is offering hot chocolate and hot dogs. Whatever, Norm's used to giving till it hurts. Last Christmas, he gave his sister a kidney. Beats an AR-15, I'd say.

8 Jelena watch. Justin Bieber and Selena Gomez could be getting back together. The on-again, off-again couple were spotted going all on-again at the Salt Lake City airport. (What else is there to do at the Salt Lake City airport?) Don't worry about all that bad news. Things are going to be OK after all.

Student aims to save the turtles

Nathan Weaver, right, a student at Clemson University, talks to his professor, Rob Baldwin, on Dec. 12 as they wait to see if a fake turtle he is using in his research is run over near Clemson, S.C. Weaver is placing the fake turtle on roads near the campus to see how many drivers intentionally run over it. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Shell shocker

"I've heard of people and from friends who knew people that ran over turtles. But to see it out here like this was a bit shocking."

Clemson University student Nathan Weaver, who watched as seven drivers within one hour swerved and deliberately ran over the plastic turtle he placed on the road.

Incredible journey

It takes a turtle seven or eight years to become mature enough to reproduce, and in that time it might make several trips across the road to get from one pond to another, looking for food or a place to lay eggs. A female turtle that lives 50 years might lay more than 100 eggs, but just two or three are likely to survive to reproduce, says Rob Baldwin, Nathan Weaver's professor at Clemson University.

Reptilian remedies

Are turtle trestles the answer?

Weaver, who became interested in conservation through the Boy Scouts and TV's Crocodile Hunter, Steve Irwin, wants to figure out the best way to get turtles safely across the road and keep the population from dwindling further. Among the possible solutions: turtle underpasses or an education campaign aimed at teenagers on why drivers shouldn't mow turtles down. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Joaquin Phoenix turns in an unforgettable performance as a Naval veteran who becomes deeply involved with a cult upon his return from the war in The Master. HANDOUT

Reel Guys

RICHARD CROUSE AND MARK BRESLIN

Best of the big screen

The year in review. From childish charms to fantastic frights, Metro's movie mavericks reveal their top picks from 2012

Blast from the past

The Reel Guys are taking a break from looking at film screens to look back at the year that was at the movies. They've sat through a cinematic blend of the good, the bad and the ugly this year and today they look back on the good times.

Richard: Mark, I'm very surprised to find that when I look back at my favourite films of the year, many of them fall under one category — kids' films. ParaNorman harkens back to a time when Disney used to make creepy cartoons like The Legend of Sleepy Hollow, before it was decided that children shouldn't be exposed to anything except talking animals and stories about the ecology. I also loved Brave and Madagascar 3. How about you?

Mark: Richard, I have a two-year-old at home, so the thought of kids' movies just reminds me of my lack of sleep and the drool on my sweater. My favourite film of the year was definitely not for kids — The Master. Two brilliant actors — Philip Seymour Hoffman and Joaquin Phoenix — facing off in a story about power and ideals in a post-war cult, was about as good as it gets for me. Not that the film was perfect — it had no ending and ran out of steam in the last 20 minutes. But it was an ambitious film about ambition.

RC: I loved The Master as well, but man-oh-man did I get some hate mail regarding my endorsement of the movie. It was polarizing and those who hated it were quite vocal. Less controversial, but almost as strange, was Cabin in the Woods. I can tell you there has never been a slasher flick quite like Cabin. The subversive mix of horror movie lore, post-modern self-awareness and gruesome gags isn't new, but rarely has it been this smartly presented.

MB: I loved Cabin in the Woods, but another favourite horror film this year was Sinister, with Ethan Hawke. It was truly disturbing and got under my skin in a truly creepy way. But here's a movie I loved that most people couldn't sit through: Cosmopolis by David Cronenberg. Plotless, talky, theoretical as a grad thesis, but the most relevant film of the year in terms of what's really going on. And Paul Giamatti's burst of lucid insanity at the end of the movie was as good a piece of acting and dialogue as anything I've seen this year.

RC: I liked that too, as well as newer releases like Django Unchained, Zero Dark Thirty and The Guilt Trip, but I also want to mention The Grey from earlier on. The mix of Liam Neeson, wolves and unbridled manliness made The Expendables look positively delicate by comparison.

MB: I liked The Grey as well. But I always like to put a comedy on my list and this year it was Lola Versus, an indie picture that was like Annie Hall from Diane Keaton's point of view.

Drama

Not Fade Away

Director. David Chase

Stars. John Magaro, Jack Huston

The core of the story revolves around rock 'n' blues music, wannabe New Jersey rock star Doug (John Magaro) and the repercussions of living through the turbulent 1960s. Sopranos creator David Chase nicely sets up the decade and the anti-establishment stance personified by the soundtrack's music, but is let down by episodic storytelling and the lack of really compelling characters or situations. From the opening moments the story builds to an anti-climax, and on that score it delivers, providing one of the oddest and least satisfying conclusions to a movie in recent memory.

Merlin's magic rooted in show's talented writers

Final season. The fantasy TV series based on Camelot's cast of characters balances intense scenes with a certain lightness

STEPHEN ERAMO
scene@metronews.ca

Since arriving in Camelot, a young man named Merlin has secretly used his magical powers to not only help protect the legendary kingdom, but also unlock its many secrets. In doing so, our unsung hero discovered that he and Camelot's future king, Arthur, shared a common destiny. In the fifth and final season of the hit fantasy TV series Merlin, the now-King Arthur and his loyal servant Merlin are pitted against evil forces committed to destroying Camelot. Throughout it all, the one constant is their enduring friendship.

"When we first met Merlin, he was a young man and Arthur (Bradley James) was a young prince," says Colin Morgan, who plays Merlin. "In the past five seasons, my character has gone from being a poodle to an Irish wolfhound. It's been a big learning curve for him as well as Arthur. They've grown up together, both as characters and in their friendship. Merlin and Arthur are essentially complete opposites, but have to work side-by-side towards the same goal."

Bradley James stars as Camelot's now-king, Arthur, in the fifth season of Merlin. HANDOUT

"With Merlin and Arthur, you can be in the middle of telling this full-blown opera given the intensity of their dilemma, and they can turn it into an operetta. I've always liked when the two of them are facing certain doom and they bring a lightness to the situation," adds Bradley James.

Merlin's two-part season five opener, called Arthur's Bane, is set three years after the year four finale and sees the return of the show's most beautiful and formidable adversary, Morgana, played by Katie McGrath.

"It's interesting because what they (the show's writers) did with Morgana in the time between seasons four and five really helped me with my performance because it moved my character on from where she was in the fourth season," says McGrath. "The fact that she had been directly persecuted for being magical sort of vindicated her feelings of anger towards Arthur. That reinforced Morgana's belief that she was doing the right thing in trying to remove him from the throne.

"So if it's possible, she is now more determined than before, and maybe a little bit crazy, too."

Looking ahead, what will Morgan miss most about Merlin?

"I think we all agree what we'll miss most will be the people," says the actor. "We had to do a lot of things bordering on the ridiculous to the emotionally charged, and without the support of everyone working on the show, that could have been very difficult, but it wasn't. It was a genuinely enjoyable experience."

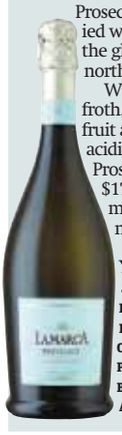
As much as it pains me to admit it, I know that most of you will be having sparkling wine for the first time this year as an adiós toast to the end of 2012 and the start of 2013.

What kills me is that a glass of bubbles can be so much more than just a ching ching supporting actor to a standalone celebration: Brunch enhancer (check), accommodating big meal mate (check), Super Bowl junk food companion (check)!

For top-of-the-line fizzy fun, uncork a bottle of champagne. Most bubbly production tricks were originally put to bottle in the French region (about an hour north of Paris) that shares its name and that pedigree never comes cheap. Less expensive versions — using champagne's "traditional method" of winemaking — can be found from countries the world over. Just pick your price range and fill your flute.

The hottest trend in alternative effervescence is Prosecco, a light-bodied wine made from the glera grape in northern Italy.



With its festive froth, ripe, tropical fruit and cleansing acidity, La Marca Prosecco ($17.95 to $17.99) will help make your midnight merry.

Brie. A New Year's Eve party would not be complete without a range of appetizers

Brie is a cheese that is always a popular appetizer. This meltingly delicious version is topped with a mixture of mushrooms and walnuts. Serve with thinly sliced whole-wheat baguette or plain crackers.

Ingredients

12 servings
Prep time: 7 minutes
Cook time: 20 minutes

- 250 g (1/2 lb) fresh sliced white or cremini mushrooms
- 125 ml (1/2 cup) coarsely chopped onion
- 50 ml (1/4 cup) finely chopped walnuts
- 1 large clove garlic, sliced
- 2 ml (1/2 tsp) each dried thyme, rosemary and pepper
- 15 ml (1 tbsp) olive oil
- 15 ml (1 tbsp) balsamic vinegar
- 1 wheel (200 g) cold brie
- 30 ml (2 tbsp) minced fresh parsley or chives (optional)

1. In a food processor, finely chop mushrooms, onion, walnuts, garlic, thyme, rosemary and pepper.

2. In a large skillet over medium, heat oil; cook and stir mushroom mixture for 5 to 7 minutes or until all liquid has evaporated. Stir in vinegar and cook for 1 to 2 minutes. Remove from heat and let cool to room temperature; cover and chill.

3. At serving time, slice brie in half horizontally and place, cut side up, on ovenproof serving plate or baking pan. Spoon topping evenly on cut surfaces of brie.

4. Bake in a 180 C (350 F) oven for 8 to 10 minutes or until cheese is beginning to melt. Sprinkle with parsley to garnish, if desired.

Variation: To barbecue, place cheese on a cedar plank that has been soaked; grill, covered, over medium-high heat for 8 to 10 minutes.

Tip: For smaller groups, bake and top half of the cheese at a time; wrap the other half securely in plastic wrap and refrigerate.

Here's a Canadian favourite traditionally served during the holidays made into tartlets with a slight twist. You can make the tourtiere mixture up to one day ahead and just warm through in the microwave, then scoop into the wonton tartlets to serve. Serve on a platter and garnish with parsley.

Ingredients

48 wonton wrappers (1 pkg)
Prep time: 15 minutes
Cook time: 40 minutes
Baking Time: 13 minutes

- 500 ml (2 cups) cubed peeled potatoes (about 3 medium)
- 250 g (8 oz) each lean ground pork and veal
- 500 ml (2 cups) coarsely chopped mushrooms
- 3 cloves garlic, minced
- 2 onions, finely chopped
- 1 bay leaf
- 125 ml (1/2 cup) sodium-reduced chicken broth
- 5 ml (1 tsp) dried sage leaves
- 2 ml (1/2 tsp) each salt, pepper, dried allspice and dried thyme
- 2 whole cloves
- 50 ml (1/4 cup) minced fresh parsley

1. In a saucepan of boiling salted water, cook potatoes until very tender, about 15 minutes. Drain and mash. Set aside.

2. In a large skillet, sauté pork and veal over medium-high heat until no longer pink, about 8 minutes. Drain fat. Add mushrooms, garlic, onions, bay leaf, broth, sage, salt, pepper, allspice, thyme and cloves; bring to a boil. Reduce heat and cook, stirring, until no liquid remains, about 15 minutes.

3. Discard bay leaf and cloves. Stir in potatoes and parsley. Place heaping 15-ml (1-tbsp) spoonfuls into each wonton cup.

Canadian juniors backing Subban as top goaltender

World juniors. Toronto backstop will 'dictate how far he goes' in tournament with his play

Malcolm Subban's acrobatics, experience and flair have made him Canada's starting goaltender at the world junior hockey championship ... for now.

Instead of letting the goaltending question linger deep into the tournament, coach Steve Spott felt it better to end speculation after Canada's opening game and infuse Subban with the confidence of knowing he's the man in net for the tournament.

"Malcolm's play is going to dictate how far he goes, but right now he's the guy we're going to continue to run with and it's going to be up to him to carry the ball," the coach said Thursday.

The Belleville Bulls goalie has size, reach and speed, plus familiarity with the wider ice in Europe because Belleville's Yardmen Arena is the same size. The six-foot-two, 200-pound Subban sells his glove saves with a flick of the wrist, which tells the players in front of him "I got his."

"I feel like making those saves obviously helps a lot, and making them a little fancy gives the team a little confidence," Subban said. "Just knowing your coaches have the confidence in you, that you're going to play all the games, that helps a lot obviously as well."

So after stopping 25 of 28 shots in Canada's 9-3 win over Germany to open the tournament, the 19-year-old from Toronto will be back in the net for Friday's Pool B game versus Slovakia.

Canada tops the pool at 1-0 with three points. The Slovaks forced Russia to overtime Wednesday before the hosts pulled out a 3-2 victory for two points.

Close call

A nervous moment came in Canada's practice Thursday when Boone Jenner collided with defencemen Xavier Ouellet in the neutral zone.

- Both players got slowly to their feet. Jenner can't play until Monday because of a three-game suspension.
- "They're both fine," coach Steve Spott said.

Team Canada goalie Malcolm Subban looks up ice during practice on Thursday in Ufa, Russia. NATHAN DENETTE/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Subban's point-blank pad save on Germany's Tobias Rieder in the third period Wednesday demonstrated he can make game-changing saves.

"Everyone has seen that save that I don't think many people could make it," goaltending coach Ron Tugnutt said. "When he makes that save, the bench kind of straightens up and gets excited."

The flaw in Subban's game has been lapses of concentration resulting in questionable or soft goals.

Jordan Binnington of the Owen Sound Attack is less flamboyant in net, but his solid technique made the goaltending competition interesting at selection camp in Calgary.

Spott believes Subban has the mental resilience to recover from gaffes, but prefers the Boston Bruins prospect not make them in the first place.

"These are one-goal games and if our goaltender goes to sleep for one second that could determine a gold or a silver medal," Spott said.

Canada's offence sparkles at Spengler Cup

Canada's Ryan Smyth, right, celebrates his goal against HC Davos on Thursday with teammate Tyler Seguin in Davos, Switzerland. SALVATORE DI NOLFI/KEYSTONE

If there were any doubts about Canada's scoring touch at the Spengler Cup, they were emphatically put to rest Thursday.

Byron Ritchie scored two second-period goals to lead Canada to a convincing 5-0 win over host HC Davos. Canada (1-1) took better advantage of its offensive chances in this contest against the defending tournament champion than it did in its opener, a stunning 2-1 overtime loss to German side Adler Mannheim.

"None of these guys were happy about losing last night and they certainly showed it in their play tonight," said head coach Doug Shedden. "We put a system in place in the neutral zone that wouldn't let Davos play their style of hockey."

John Tavares, Ryan Smyth and Jason Williams had the other goals for Canada, whose roster is a mix of NHLers and national team veterans. Players like Jason Spezza, Sam Gagner and Patrice Bergeron line up alongside Ritchie, who is in his fourth season of playing in Europe.

"If you ask anyone in the dressing room, it doesn't really matter who scores," said Ritchie, who plays with Bern of the Swiss league and has also suited up in Sweden and Belarus. "We're here as a team and we have one goal in mind, and that's to win the tournament."

Edmonton Oilers goalie Devan Dubnyk, who earned the start ahead of Jonathan Bernier, stopped 25 shots for the shutout in his first taste of game action since last April.

Police: Brent's blood-alcohol was twice legal limit at time of fatal crash

Dallas Cowboys nose tackle Josh Brent was driving with a suspended licence and had a blood-alcohol content more than twice the legal limit at the time of the car crash that killed teammate and friend Jerry Brown, according to documents released by police Thursday. The 24-year-old Brent was tested after the crash in the early hours of Dec. 8 at 0.189 per cent, well above the Texas limit of 0.08.

Little about Christine Sinclair's brilliant performance at the London Olympics came as a surprise to her teammates.

But it allowed the rest of the world to finally see the captain they all know so well.

The 29-year-old star of Canada's women's soccer team lifted her squad to a bronze medal at last summer's Olympics, Canada's first medal in a traditional team sport since 1936. The result firmly entrenched her as a Canadian sports hero and brought global acclaim to a player who has been among the best for years.

It also capped a tremendous season that earned her the Bobbie Rosenfeld Award as The Canadian Press female athlete of 2012.

"She's always been one of the best in the world; she's always been fantastic, and what's great about this year is that the world got to see her at the highest stage — Olympics," said Canada's veteran goalkeeper Karina LeBlanc. "The world was watching, and she showed what we've all known for so long.

"People are starting to see all sides of her — her funny side and her humble side. She's a phenomenal athlete and she believes so much."

Sinclair earned 269 points, including the majority of first-place votes (84), to run away with the award, which is determined through balloting among sports editors and broadcasters across the country. Olympic trampoline champion Rosie MacLennan was second with 118 points, ahead of speed skater Christine Nesbitt (76), tennis player Eugenie Bouchard (30) and hockey player Caroline Ouellette (27).

"It's a huge honour," the Burnaby, B.C., native said before deflecting praise to her teammates.

"I'm proud of our team. We had a goal this year heading into the Olympics, and that was to bring home a medal, and we accomplished that, and just to sort of see the way Canada fell in love with our team, it's been very remarkable."

Sinclair led Canada to bronze at the London Olympics in spectacular fashion, scoring an Olympic-record six goals to win the Golden Boot.

AHL. Marlies stick with their winning formula

The first-place Toronto Marlies are looking like a model of success in the American Hockey League this season.

For the second year in a row, the Marlies are playing winning hockey by following an organizational model of defence and accountability. But there's more to the success of Dallas Eakins' team than just following a blueprint.

The Marlies, after living up to expectations with an appearance in the AHL final last season, are refusing to let any kind of setback derail them in 2013. That has proved challenging because the roster is overflowing with locked-out NHLers, making ice time difficult to come by for many players.

The Marlies have charged into first place in the North Division, riding an 11-2 streak as they get set for a weekend series in Grand Rapids, Mich.

Toronto is loaded with NHL-calibre players, so it's fair to set expectations at a high level. The club has suffered injuries to several key players — Jake Gardiner, Jussi Rynnas, Nazem Kadri and Mike Zigomanis — yet still managed to succeed.

The commitment to defence and responsibility is firmly entrenched from last year's run to the final. This year, with the NHL lockout running into the new year, there is much more public focus on the team, yet the increased attention hasn't distracted the from fulfilling that commitment.

"I think the city has paid more attention to what our players are doing individually and as a team," Eakins said. "We have outstanding young men who are leaders and are of high character. We want these kind of individuals representing our city of Toronto's name. The players understand their place in this hockey-first city."

Indeed, the city is paying more attention to the Marlies, and it's not entirely owing to the lockout.

The team sold out the Air Canada Centre on Boxing Day — 18,800 fans filled the rink — to set a new indoor-attendance record for the AHL.

The record crowd also vaulted the Marlies' 2012-13 attendance to unprecedented levels. The club has jumped from sixth in the AHL in per-game attendance to second , at 7,025. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
Try not to be too easily influenced by what other people say. If you are not certain what to believe it may be tempting to follow the crowd, but that could lead you in the wrong direction. Be independent and patient.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
Because you find it hard to see the wider picture and understand how things fit together, you may find yourself at a bit of a loss today. Never mind. Everything will make sense once the full moon begins to wane.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
No one is perfect, not even you, so accept that mistakes will be made and that it is all part of the game called Life. Strive to raise your mind above petty differences – in the greater scheme of things they really don't matter.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
Today's full moon in your sign urges you to be realistic about what you can achieve. It also tells you to form alliances with people who can help you get what you want.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
If you take too much for granted over the next 24 hours, it could end in disappointment when your efforts bring in less than you think you deserve. Confidence is a fragile thing – don't do anything that might lead to its loss.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
There may be one or two tense moments with a loved one today, but you are entitled to stand up for yourself. Alternatively, if you can't be bothered with confrontation, just stay out of their way.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Something will happen today that catches you unaware. Should you have seen it coming? Maybe, but that's a question that no longer matters. What counts is what you are going to do next. Be bold. Seize the initiative.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
You are entitled to your opinions, but if at some stage today it becomes obvious that your opinions are wrong, you must change them. If you keep pushing a viewpoint that is out of date, your reputation may suffer.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
The full moon warns if you give away too much personal information now you will regret it later. Beware strangers who seek to strike up a rapport. Chances are they're after something — most likely your hard-earned cash.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
If you are wise, you will wait until today's full moon has begun to wane before pushing ahead with a plan or project. You should also get other people involved, even if it is something highly personal.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
Take care you don't go over the top with some of your ideas. You may want to make the world a better place, but if you expect it to happen overnight you will be disappointed.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
What you want to do and what family and friends want to do are likely to be two entirely different things today, in which case you must either compromise or go off on your own. Compromise is better.
